interface (API), available for Microsoft Windows and Mac OS X. As of AutoCAD 2016, the free AutoLISP for AutoCAD is the current implementation. AutoLISP for AutoCAD is available in all versions of AutoCAD since AutoLISP version 2.0. AutoLISP for AutoCAD is implemented by the former Visual LISP Autocadteam (OLITO, which became OLITO 3D) in collaboration with Autodesk. In the 2000s, AutoCAD also supported an ActiveX version of Visual LISP named Visual LISP ActiveX. This version of Visual LISP for AutoCAD is not installed by default on every installation of AutoCAD. In AutoCAD 2000, there was also support for Visual BASIC, which was included with version 10.0 (x64). Visual BASIC is the "technical heart" of AutoCAD LT.

Unlike the more widely used Visual LISP language, Visual BASIC is a specialized programming language designed to be used by programmers familiar with Windows and DOS-based systems. The Visual BASIC version included with AutoCAD LT was the first version to include a debugger. AutoCAD also supports the ObjectARX automation API. Since AutoCAD 2014 there is also support for VBA in AutoCAD, as of AutoCAD 2014
