TuneIn Radio shows, Live music:.Payment for payments, Part Three: The value of that time Your time is one of the most important intangible resources in your professional life and it is one of the most undervalued assets that you can possess. After all, you spend hundreds of hours each week doing busy work in order to be in a position to spend time serving and assisting others. This is time that pays dividends for years to come, whether or not you make any money from it, which is why you must place value on it at the start of each week. I have written before about the value of time in the context of procrastination. However, these essays were about the psychology of time and how to overcome procrastination with respect to working towards a goal, or anything else that requires a great deal of time and effort. This time is the most valuable commodity in your life and it deserves to be paid for. Do you have the time? In advance of this week's writing challenge, I wanted to ask you a question: do you have the time to write these essays? More specifically, do you have the time for the discipline of coming up with great ideas and ideas that draw your attention to how you can improve your personal effectiveness? Can you write in your spare time? While it is true that you might not make much money doing these essays, you will improve your mastery of your own process by writing great ideas and have lots of fun doing so. If you do not have the time to write these essays, it would be wise to re-evaluate what you're doing with your time. You may be spending time and energy on things that are not valuable to you because they are rewarding financially or because they keep you busy. In this week's writing
